How it works

In phase one, teams compete to score the most points on the scoreboard. They build models from magnetic rods and balls, called investment vehicles, and sell them to the market for points.

01

Strategy

Our trainers explain the rules. Teams then have 10 minutes to plan their strategy and agree who does what.

02

Challenges

Teams complete hands-on challenges. Each completed challenge earns a Red Rock token, which they swap for rods and balls.

03

Build and sell

Teams use the rods and balls to build investment vehicles, then sell them to the market for points. There are three models, and the more complex ones earn more points.

04

Timed rounds

Teams repeat the challenges, building and selling in timed rounds. After every round, the market changes its prices. The more of a model teams sell, the lower its price.

Phase two

After a review with our trainers, the teams stop competing and join together. They work towards a shared target, usually double their combined score from phase one.

Trainer-led reviews

In the first review, teams compare their strategy with what they did, then plan together for the shared target. The final review covers what helped teams work together and how to use it at work.
